othe Manamater Store A Trade Sale of SILKS

50 Rare Kermansha A Large and Unusual Transaction

The broad silk industry in the United States was begun away back in 1846, when John Ryle, the founder of the Pioneer Silk Company, began their manufacture in the little town of Paterson since become the Lyons of America.

Father and sons built up a magnificent business, known the world over for producing silks of high worth and artistic beauty.

A few months ago the Company went into the hands of a receiver, and the entire stock sof splendid silks on hand had to be sold.

The immense distributing power of our New York and Philadelphia stores furnished the best possible outlet for the sixty thousand yards that needed a quick buyer; and with the consent of the receiver and the confirmation of the Courts of New Jersey the silks came to us.

To-day this store's allotment is ready; and makes man and the money are missing. Mrs. Rose Flegner is a widow. She kept a small grocery at No. 162 McKibsen street, Williamsburg, and lived with her three children in two rear rooms. Louis, her eldest son, was way, ward and spent little of his time at home. The weeks ago he returned from Massachusetts, where he had been farming. In some way he learned that his mother had saved up 1100, which she intended to spend in improving the force. He inquired about the money are missing. He inquired about the money is not the force surrounding the pest-house at Snake Hill and faced unawed the loaded rifles of penitentiary guards. Angered by the refusal of Dr. King to let him have the body for burial outside the Bnake Hill Potter's Field, Costo gathered friends and adherents from the kallan vilage in Jersey City and led them against the institution. But for the opportune arrival of the Rev. Father Pius O'Connor serious trouble would have followed. The priest addressed the Italians in Six Contractors on East River Bridge No. 3.

John L. Phea, Commissioner of Bridges, sent notices to-day to the six contractors who bid for the work of building the foundation piers on the Brooklyn side of Past River Bridge No. 3. from Grand street, Manhattan, to Plymouth and Adams streets, Brooklyn, that they might receive the certified checks deposited by them with Comptroller Coler on March II, the day they presented their bids.

This was in pursuance of the opinion rendered by Corporation Counsel Whalen, that any contract entered into under those bids would be invalid under the decision of the Court of Appeals that the prevailing rate of wages law and the law compelling that all dressed stone used in public works must be dressed in New York State were unconstitutional. that they might receive the certified triesed in Jaw 1918 State of the Stitutional.

Under the Corporation Counsel's advice Commissioner Shea rejected all these bids, and to-day he framed a new advertisement for new bids, omitting all stipulations in the specifications referring to these laws. This was sent to the Corporation Counsel for approval.

Gould Case Under Advisement.

Mrs. Howard Gould's appeal from the order of the City Court, which decided that the case of Smitn & Dillon against the millionaire's wife should be tried before a jury instead of before a referee, as she desired, had a hearing to-day in the Appellate Division of the Supremo Court and decision was reserved.

Mrs. Fiegner told her daughter where she had secreted her money, but the purse was missing. She said that was why she had been attacked.

Capt. Corwin, of the Stagg street police station, put all his available men to work on the case. Louis Flegner is described as 5 feet 3 inches in height, slim, sallow skinned, smooth face and dark haired.

He wore a shabby gray suit and a bicycle cap.

Only One New Case.

One new case of small-pox was reported to the Board of Health this morning, that of Kate Steinberger, fourteen years old, of No. 282 East Foirth street. The following deaths from small-pox were reported from North Brother Island: William Andersoo, two years old, of No. 2945 Second avenue, and Edwin Winkley, three years old, or No. 295 East One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street.
